The 12.93 megawatt-dc solar farm, located on the closed L&D Landfill, will be the largest landfill solar farm in the United States when it is completed. The 41,720 solar panels will generate enough electricity to power more than 2,000 average-size homes annually. The L&D Landfill Solar Farm is the twenty-seventh centralized "Solar 4 All" project and the eight built on a landfill or brownfield site. The 50 acre site, most of which is located in Eastampton Township, is owned by Waste Management of New Jersey. PSE&G will own and operate the solar farm, which is expected to go into service in early 2016.
